Grade 7-10—This book offers solid information and advice in a friendly, conversational style. The first part is a fictional diary in which a teen describes her encounters with drugs and alcohol, including a friend who tried them, got in trouble, and decided to stop using. The second part explains what drugs do to the body, how to avoid addiction, and what to do if a friend uses drugs. The third part presents the debate on whether drugs should be legalized, a self-administered test with answers, a table of principal substances, and statistical facts about teen use. Colorful and at times humorous paintings combine with a supportive, upbeat text. Margaret O. Hyde and John F. Setaro's Drugs 101 (21st Century, 2003) offers more information and documentation. However, the approachable writing style, often-funny cartoons, and portable format make this offering one that teens and reluctant readers may actually consult and enjoy.—Debbie Stewart Hoskins, Grand Rapids Public Library, MI Copyright © Reed Business Information, a division of Reed Elsevier Inc.
