Kelly DiPucchio is a New York Times bestselling author of several books for children, including Grace for President and Clink. She lives in a brick-cozy house in southeastern Michigan with her husband and three children, who aren't so little anymore. Matthew Myers was created in rural Oregon. After being programmed in fine arts and graphic arts at the Museum Art School in Portland, he functioned quite satisfactorily for twenty years as an advertising art director. He now paints and illustrates in Brooklyn, New York.

...since R2D2 is shoved aside by glitzier and more purposeful robots until... Well, you know right from the beginning that this one is going to have a happy ending, but there are lots of visual rewards along the way. Every wall and shelf has something clever, original, and humorous to keep both listeners and readers coming back for a repeat examination. Everything from the endpapers to the author and illustrator bios sticks to the theme. Your child will be ready for a game of "What if there were a robot for [name a zany purpose]?" and a drawing session.

I used this as part of an art lesson for Kindergarteners. They LOVED this story. The illustrations are beautiful.

fantastic illustrations. Super cute story. I have 2 and 4 yr old boys and have a BA in Literature.

My little guy (3.5) loves robots. We purchased this book for him as a special Christmas book and he loves it. It has an engaging story and really tugs on his (and my) heart strings. Definitely recommended Wonderful book! My boys love it!

Great book! Our son loves it!

great illustrations, very cute story

I read this book to my kindergarteners classes and they did an art project after. They really enjoyed the story and were able to come up with lots of creative ideas for their own drawings of robots.
