Tea Time In Sri Lanka: Photos From The Dambatenne Tea Garden, Lipton's Seat And A Ceylon Tea Factory

Synopsis

Set off on a sight-seeing tour of the mountain region of Sri Lanka with 36 photographs of the Dambatenne Tea Garden and tea factory founded by Sir Thomas Lipton. The brief text accompanying each image offers commentary on cultivating and processing tea, life on the tea plantations and other observations from the author's trip to Sri Lanka in February 2015.

Marketa Palatin comes from the Czech Republic and currently lives in Prague. Her hobbies include photography and travel, which she enjoys combining to create photo books featuring destinations all over the world. Marketa has two children, who are an endless source of inspiration and teach her to see seemingly ordinary moments and places with new eyes.

This is an absolutely gorgeous photo book that gives the reader the feeling that you have experienced Sri Lanka for yourself. Each page is a full color photo printed with great vibrancy. The moments captured are artistic and honest. I highly recommend this book for classrooms and anyone wanting to experience a little part of another big world.

Truly an incredible set of pictures. I love having this out on my coffee table and even though I have been to Sri Lanka, it was breath taking. Makes me realize that there was a LOT I haven't seen.

I read the paperback version of this book. Marketa introduces great photos and a powerful collection of landscapes and human beings. Short but interesting information come with (almost) each photo, adding value to the work. An interesting visual read, especially if you are interested in travel and cultures like me.
