My daughter(4y/o) and myself enjoyed this book. I originally got it b/c i felt an obligation as a parent to provide the proper growth and development for my childs identity. Many children may not have the so called "common name" and feel they are the only ones in their school that are 'different.' This confusion and doubt will only carry to throughout their adulthood. I wanted my child to read books that she could relate to, the fact that a cool cartoon character is wearing a head scarf makes her connect with this book more so then any other book we have read. She's learning to pronounce the names of these characters correctly by listening to me pronounce them as well as using their names in a sentence. The book is filled with small detail that keep you engaged and grateful that these small selection of books are available. Im looking forward to purchasing more books from this author. Regardless what type of book you buy, your money will be questioned on where it went and how it was used one day, so with good intention and a little patience your child can learn a lot from this book, not only is it uniquely entertaining, it makes you feel good as a parent. we all waste money on petty little things daily, this book is priced affordably but if you think buying books like 'spongeBob square pants' is better or more entertaining for your kid then your child is wasting precious time that could be used to develop what type of person he/she will become one day. I plan to purchase more books as gifts for some non-arab/non muslim friends, so their kids can understand how to pronounce and understand how children from other parts of the world act, and hopefully this can make the community a more understanding place for our kids to grow up in.

My son really likes this book. Just like what he experiences when he goes to the masjid! It's a good book for kids young and old. I was entertained. :) It taught the proper names for things and even etiquette and manners in a way that kids can learn what to do when they go too!

So happy I purchased this book. I'm able to read it to my daughter and she is fascinated with all the pages and to see a little girl with hijab.

I read it to my grand kids they enjoy it , every time we read , and there is a discussion about the masjid and how to behave at the masjid

Such a great book to teach young children about masjid etiquette.

My nephew loved the book. It gives encouragement to go to the masjid.

An excellent book for toddlers!

The English and grammar is a bit off. I find it to be very wordy.
