Customer Reviews

This set serves as a good starting place for those seeking consumer information. Examples of the signed entries include Americans with Disabilities Act, Auto purchasing, Credit reporting agencies, Food labeling, Insurance, Poverty guidelines, and Renters rights. There is also information on historical consumer-focused laws and other public-related information as well as short biographies of those who have influenced or impacted consumer law or civil equality, including Erin Brockovich, Rachel Carson, John F. Kennedy, Martin Luther King Jr., Ralph Nader, and Esther Peterson. Entries conclude with see also references and a selection of additional readings to guide further research. Accompanying the A-Z entries are a contextual essay on the history of the consumer movement and a time line detailing U.S. presidents and the significant consumer policies enacted during their administrations. Volume 2 concludes with a brief appendix of primary sources, a bibliography, and an index. One issue on the layout: there are 38 tables within the entries, but, unfortunately, they are not shown in the table of contents, and they appear with no delineation from the text of the entries, which is rather jarring. That issue aside, this encyclopedia is recommended for high-school and academic libraries. --Paula Webb
